Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: ... reflects credit upon all concerned. It has a capacity for the accommodation of 75 pupils and was filled during the past year. The Methodist mission, close by, is superintended by the Rev. J. J. Methvin. It is the oldest of the mission schools and has been abundantly successful. This school has a capacity for 80 pupils and has been filled during the past year. Both these school plants are admirably conducted and have been of lasting good to the Indians of the reservations. Too much credit can not be given for the management of these institutions. The Presbyterian mission, known as the Mary Gregory Memorial School, is located 4 miles below the agency, on the road to Chickasha, a town in the Indian Territory on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, from which town the mission is 12 miles distant. It is under the superintendence of the Rev. S. V. Fait. This plant has capacity for the accommodation of 50 pupils and was filled the past year. It is admirably conducted and promises well for the future. The Reformed Presbyterian Church has a mission, known as the Cache Creek Mission, located about 25 miles southwest from the agency. It has capacity for the accommodation of 50 pupils and is well filled. This mission, which is in charge of Rev. W. W. Carithers, has been successful in school work and is considered an advantage to the Indians who live in the neighborhood of its location. Besides the mission schools established by Christian churches for the benefit of the Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche Indians, there are fifteen missionaries working on the reservation under the patronage of various religious denominations. The Episcopal mission at
