Not illustrated. 1911 Excerpt: ...by means of a system of independent schools. A draft of a bill embodying its recommendations was submitted by the commission which, after some modifications, was passed by the legislature. The text of this law is reproduced on page 504 of the present volume. The new commission was appointed August 31, 1906, and began its labors immediately. As its instructions were to proceed toward the actual establishment of industrial schools, the commission directed its efforts toward initiating at different centers throughout the State movements toward that result. Public meetings and informal conferences were held in a number of cities, in which the plans and purposes of the proposed schools were discussed by men representing all the various interests of the community. The commission submitted its first annual report in March, 1907. This report showed that considerable progress had been made toward the establishment in several cities of the industrial schools contemplated by the law. The second annual report, presented to the legislature in January, 1908, went more fully into the details connected with the performance of the duties imposed by the act creating the commission. The report showed that evening schools for industrial workers had been established by the commission in five cities, while requests for a number of others were under consideration. Upward of 1,000 pupils were in attendance upon these schools. In addition to the results of extensive inquiries into local conditions, the commission published reports of special investigations of industrial and agricultural schools in the United States and Europe.. In reviewing its work of the year the commission reported that during the past year the interest in industrial education steadily increased among all ...
